DR. EARL R. MEYERS
Father of Black Medicine in Fresno

Who Was Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers, MD

Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers is being honored this month by the GRAPEVINE as he enters into his 25th Silver Anniversary Year of medical practice in Fresno. Dr. Meyers, who is sometimes called the "Father of Black Medicine in Fresno" by his colleagues has given untiring medical assistance, support and encouragement to numerous Blacks and Mexican-Americans of this community in the fields of medicine, community health, and education.

"Earl" or "Turk," as many Fresno oldtimers affectionately call him, was transplanted in Fresno at the age of nine months when his dad, Mr. Louis Meyers and his mom, Mrs. Mary Meyers, along with their two older sons, Louis E. & John C., left Alexandria, Louisiana to make their stake on more fertile ground. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Meyers opened a grocery store-restaurant on "E" Street and young Earl was often seen there helping his mom and dad in the business. When the depression came and their customers were unable to pay their bills, the Meyers' closed the business and Mr. Meyers began, what was later to become, a lucrative and flourishing junk business.

Shortly thereafter, Earl's mom became ill, followed by a series of illnesses and operations, which lasted over a long period of Earl's young life. Here was when young Earl decided to become a doctor of medicine when he was inspired by Dr. Henry C. Wallace, the only black doctor who had been to Fresno. Earl was deeply impressed that Dr. Wallace was able to relieve his mother of pain and suffering. As the young Earl talked of wanting to be a doctor, many people told him that he could not be a doctor because he was black. In fact, he became so discouraged that, after finishing Columbia School and entering Edison High School, he decided that if he was to realize his ambition, he should change high schools. So he transferred to Fresno High School, where he took necessary subjects which were not offered at Edison. Earl excelled at Fresno High; but often had to walk the five miles to school since there were no school buses. After graduation, he matriculated into Fresno State College, but due to World War II he hurriedly completed the necessary requirements for medical college and entered Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee. In September, 1945, he was graduated from Meharry as a Doctor of Medicine—his lifelong ambition finally realized. Since few, if any, white operated hospitals would accept Negroes at that time, he was apprehensive of getting an internship. Finally, he was accepted at Lincoln Hospital in Durham, North Carolina. Dr. Meyers completed his internship and a residency in Internal Medicine.

At about this time, Dr. Wallace had left Fresno and many blacks had to go without medical care as blacks and some minorities were not particularly welcomed as patients in white doctors' offices. This dire need for a black physician prompted citizens to write and ask Dr. Meyers to come "back home." Dr. Meyers returned to Fresno in August, 1947, hanging out his M.D. Shingle at 1246 "F" Street, a building his father had purchased for his office because he was so proud of him. Those were the days when black patients were segregated in the hospitals, consultations were hard to come by, and diarrhea in children was on the rampage, often leading to death. Many a mother would come home from the fields and find her baby near death from diarrhea and dehydration, rush her baby to Dr. Meyers for him to save.

Dr. Meyers worked tirelessly and faithfully. Because patients were not able to pay him for his services and buy their prescriptions too, he opened a dispensary in his office, giving patients their prescriptions at wholesale cost. Often he would not charge a patient, and more times than not, he would take money from his pocket, buy groceries for a hungry family; or have their lights and gas turned on, as there was no welfare as it is today to help many Blacks and Mexicans just coming to Fresno. He often argued and went "to bat" to see that a disabled patient qualified for veterans, social security, old age, or welfare benefits.

Dr. Meyers became involved in the total community. In 1953, when he was Legislative Chairman of the local NAACP, he became the first Black to be elected to a public office in Fresno. This position was on the Board of Freeholders, a Board set up by the citizenry to write a new city charter.

For ten years, Dr. Meyers practiced alone as the only Black physician in the Fresno area. Having such a voluminous practice, and sometimes working twenty hours a day, Dr. Meyers went to Denver, Colorado and encouraged a young Black doctor who had done a residency at Fresno General, to come to Fresno to practice. After this he encouraged many other Black doctors to practice here, many times referring patients to give them a good start. In 1957 he built the first-owned Black Medical Center—The Fresno-Klette Medical Arts Center—at 444 Fresno Street, because he wanted to see that Blacks and other minorities of the West Fresno area had a place where there was a community comprehensive medical program. There he shared this center with three other Black doctors and established a drug store with a black pharmacist, a laboratory and X-ray department as a convenience to the people of West Fresno.

Dr. Earl Meyers' deeds are too numerous to list in this publication for lack of space, but Fresno is indeed fortunate to have been the foster parent of this outstanding, farsighted, and brilliant man.

Dr. Meyers is the father of Earl Meyers, Jr., who is a graduate of Fresno State College, organist at Westside 7th Day Adventist Church and Second Baptist Church, and FSC Librarian; Eric Louis, who is a predoctoral senior at North Carolina Central University, Durham, N. C.; Gayle Katherine, who is a nursing assistant and student at Fresno City College; Michael Roderick, who is a sophomore at Oakwood College; and David Keith Meyers, who is a junior at Hoover High School.

The Dream of Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers For His Medical Center in West Fresno

Early in his 1930's childhood, Dr. Earl Meyers recognized the need for adequate medical care as his mother, Mrs. Mary Cooper Meyers, suffered in pain until Dr. Henry Wallace, the only Black doctor in Fresno, came and ministered treatment. This early experience sowed the seeds in his young mind of becoming a medical doctor. He wanted to help people get well and stay well. From that time on, he dedicated his life for the practice of medicine.

After finishing Columbia Elementary School, he went to Edison High School where he soon learned that completing requirements for entrance into college premedical courses meant he needed Latin. Finding out that he could not get Latin at Edison, his parents sought the advice of a Fresno leader to help him get enrolled at Fresno High School, a predominantly white school where the required Latin was taught. The studious Earl graduated from Fresno High with many of his classmates who were also later to become medical doctors and lawyers.

He entered Fresno State College on Van Ness and McKinley Avenues for his premedical courses. World War II was in its beginning stage. Medical schools were being taken over by the United States government for the training of doctors for military service. Earl was assigned into Military Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee, one of two Medical Schools for African-Americans. There, he was in the Army Specialized Training Program graduating in 1945 as a 1st Lieutenant.

To become licensed as a practicing physician and surgeon, it was necessary to complete a hospital internship for practical training. In 1945 he was accepted at Lincoln Hospital in Durham, North Carolina, which was, during those years of segregation in America, one of a few hospitals where African-Americans were admitted. During this hospital internship at Lincoln Hospital, Dr. Meyers met his future wife, Marie Burton who was to become his business partner and the mother of his five children, Earl Jr., Eric, Garle, Michael, and David. Dr. Meyers followed his internship with a residency in Internal Medicine.

In the meantime, Dr. Henry Wallace went out of practice in Fresno, leaving a void for a Black doctor. Friends and Earl's parents prevailed upon him to come to Fresno because many were so much in need of medical care and many doctors across town were reluctant to be hesitant to accept minority patients. Louis Meyers, Earl's father, the owner and operator of Louis Meyers and Sons Lumber business on Northern Avenue bought the 1240 F Street building in 1946 to allow Dr. Meyers to return to Fresno and establish his medical practice in 1947.

While his practice flourished as Fresno's only Black doctor, the United States became involved in the Korean Conflict and Dr. Meyers was called to be a U. S. Army Captain being stationed at Camp Roberts, California. Living at 208 Strother Avenue.

Earl and Marie were expecting their fourth child which allowed Dr. Meyers to be discharged from the Army.

In 1951 he began his practice at 1129 F Street with his wife Marie working by his side at his office and mother-in-law Julia Burton helping with the care of the children at home. As Dr. Meyers practice became overwhelmingly large, he sought to bring other Black doctors to share his medical practice. He said to his wife, "Marie, Fresno needs to have more Black doctors." He went out of town and asked another Black doctor to come to Fresno. Another day, he told his wife, "We have got to find land to build a medical center where people can use their traffic and easy accessibility to get medical care." He said, "Marie, I have been dreaming of a medical center where people can walk in without having to have transportation, get first class medical treatment, x-ray and laboratory work and their prescriptions filled at one place."

As most prime real estate property had clauses of restrictive covenants (not allowing Blacks and certain other groups to hold property) in their deeds and the U. S. Supreme Court had only recently outlawed such clauses in 1948, prime real estate was difficult to purchase. However, with Marie looked up each West Fresno properties and telephone owners. At that time, Fresno Street was the site of choice. She was able to negotiate the purchase of the corner of Fresno and Elm for cash purchase. They went to the prominent architect David Horn for plans for the center which included an x-ray and clinical laboratory. The first building was constructed of brick, glass and stucco and set on a hill. Shortly afterwards, the drugstore and three medical suites were added. Here, the Medical Center housed Dr. Meyers, Dr. Edward Mosley, Dr. Freddie Myers, and later, Dr. Neal Smith, Stewart's Pharmacy, and Charles Wedge Laboratory.

Dr. Earl Meyers dream of a Fresno Community Medical Center came true. In later years, overwork and stress took its toll. Dr. Meyers fell ill. After his recovery, health demanded that he decide. The building was sold (Marie R. Meyers 12-22-65).

Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers was born in Alexandria, Louisiana on September 23, 1919 to Louis and Mary Cooper Meyers. He was the youngest of three brothers, Louis Evelyn and John Cooper Meyers. The family located to Fresno when he was just an infant and his father Louis Meyers opened Louis Meyers and Sons Junk Yard on Neilsen Avenue, corner of Thorne and Divisadero Streets. The business thrived as the three young brothers worked with their father. Young Earl's mother became gravely ill and Dr. Henry Wallace (the only Black doctor at that time) was called in to treat her. Witnessing the care given by Dr. Wallace inspired him to want to become a physician. Earl attended Edison High School but graduated from Fresno High School and was sent to Meharry Medical School in Nashville, Tennessee, one of only two medical schools for African-Americans during World War II. In 1945, he was accepted at Lincoln Hospital in Durham, North Carolina to complete his hospital internship for practical training, one of the few hospitals where African-Americans were admitted.

As the practice had begun to become overwhelmingly large, Dr. Meyers successfully encouraged a number of African American physicians to establish their medical practices in Fresno.

ARTICLE 2: Who Was Dr. Earl R. Meyers, MD?

By 1959, Dr. Meyers relocated his practice into a newly built medical center of his design at 444 Fresno Street. The facility also provided offices for two other physicians in addition to an on-site pharmacy and clinical laboratory. He practiced medicine in Fresno until 1975. Dr. Meyers married Karin Black Butterfield and left Fresno to retire in Pebble Beach on 17 Mile Drive. Not one to ever be idle, he established three medical practices in the Monterey and Salinas areas. In a decision to move to Oregon, they sold their house just before the huge fire that destroyed many homes there. In Oregon, they first moved to Port Orford and established a medical practice. About a year later they moved up the coast to Bandon, where he established yet another thriving medical practice. He gave up the Bandon practice to move to Coos Bay where he went into semi-retirement (again) only to become head emergency room physician. Later he assisted physicians in the Northwest United States, filling in as a substitute physician which took him as far as Adak, Alaska and King Cove in the Aleutian Islands and to Indian Reservations in Oregon and California. Always on the move, his health became a major issue and at the insistence of his loving and devoted wife, Karin, Dr. Meyers FINALLY retired at the age of eighty-six. On August 11, 2014, Dr. Meyers suffered a heart attack and was hospitalized at Bay View Hospital. While there he celebrated his 95th birthday and kept insisting that he was well enough to go home. His condition deteriorated and on October 1, 2014 he died with Karin holding his hand. His minister son, Michael and granddaughter, Susan, were there to comfort him as he went to sleep in Christ, surrounded by his sister-in-law Peggy and other family members.

In the Words of Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers, M.D.

"I only wanted to do one thing. I wanted to become a doctor. I wanted this since I was a little kid and my mother got sick and she was in so much pain. She would call the doctor and he would miraculously take her pain away. I never took my eye off being a doctor. I had to keep myself focused on that. I got through high school and I was number 28 from the top of 400. I went to undergraduate school at Fresno State. After college I started to apply for medical school and was accepted to Loma Linda, Stanford and Berkley. I chose Meharry Medical School because I thought it was going to be easier program. I thought this because it was a black college. I was never so wrong. They were so particular that you had to read the footnotes, because you would be tested on it. The idea was that you had to be better than your white counter parts. when I got through, I thought that it was the grandest feeling that I ever had. And I have never felt like "Gee I wish I don't have to go to work." I couldn't hardly wait to go to work. I think that to be able to treat someone was the best thing you could do. I never let anyone come thorough my office without being treated. I treated a lot of people for free. Sometimes they would pay me in oranges. Me and my wife Mattie disagreed on this point. I did everything that I wanted to do in medicine. I looked around 15 or 20 years later and I was not a specialist, younger doctors looked down at me. I then wondered what did I ever accomplish, and it came to me that I was made to be this kind of doctor, a general practitioner. I worked hard to help people and had the guts to be honest if I didn't know how to treat them. I had no problem referring them to someone else. I was the only one in my medical class that raised my hand saying that I wanted to treat the down trodden..... everyone laughed at me and the teacher called me a liar. But I really put money before treating a patient. I got what I wanted personally out of it... and I was able to get the money too. I was a good provider for my family and that was also important to me. I wanted to be the kind of husband that my dad was to my mother. I never got that feeling until I met my wife Karin. "

Fresno Bee Newspaper Articles

By: Sharon Revis-Green (Grand Daughter)

I spent a summer researching my grandfather Dr. Earl Meyers. It was during this research that I came across several archived newspaper articles from the Fresno Bee. I was able to find articles on my grandfather when he was fifteen years old. I found news articles as early as 1934. I learned many things about him, that I never knew. I learned that he was a pretty good baseball player. He was also a high jumper on the varsity track team. Who knew?

It was also a big deal when he went away to medical school and when he came home to visit. So big that they wrote articles about it in the local paper. Later, when he returned to Fresno, they continued to write about the wonderful things he was doing as a physician here in the valley.

This is a part of local Fresno history. Dr. Meyers was a huge part of it. I have compiled all the articles I could find, so that you could see the life of my grandfather, Dr. Earl R. Meyers from a different perspective.... according to the Fresno Bee.

LARGEST CLASS IS GRADUATED AT EDISON SCHOOL

Addresses by students, duet and quartet numbers and selections by a saxophone band marked commencement exercises last night at the Edison Technical School for the largest class in its history. Dr. W. E. R. Schottstadt, of the board of education presented diplomas to 100 city-dwelling June graduates and a number who completed their work at the end of the first semester. Service E certificates, earned on a point basis, were presented by Principal W. L. Potts to Shunho Fuji and Kay R. Wren.

Ladies American Women
Miss Christine Dol, class soloist, outlined the fight of women for their rights. Her subject was "The American Women Come of Age."

"Since August 28, 1920, when the nineteenth amendment was adopted, women have been active in public and national life," she said. "At the present time twenty-nine women hold high executive positions. Thirteen of them were appointed by President Roosevelt. There are 115 women in the legislatures of thirty-four states. The American woman has come of age and is making intelligent use of her citizenship. The woman of 1930 was a child compared with the woman of 1920."

George Nagel, whose subject was the American and His Newspaper, said Will Rogers' famous comment, "All I know is what I read in the newspapers," is more nearly true of most of us than we are willing to admit.

"The sensational headlines of the newspaper," he said, "are for the most part as the leaders in stock advertising. You get something more when you go inside."

Nancy Dreifel in a valedictory address said the school curriculum now includes not only the three R's but a study of the problems of real life. "High school students," she said, "are learning how to overcome inferiority complexes, how to make and keep friends and the rules of health."

"A Roosevelt served his country's great need a quarter of a century ago and a Roosevelt is serving his country's greater needs to-day," said Hector Ronald Zamora. "Theodore Roosevelt left the White House after defeating his forces against depression and graft. To-day after twenty-five years of growth, both good and ill, this nation is again looking to a Roosevelt for leadership in a crisis."

Andrew Renha paid tribute to various members of the class. Those introduced for outstanding scholarship were Hiram Ching, Miss Dol, Miss Dreifel, Ellen Itanaga, Frieda Schmidt and Victoria Marian Tola.

Addie Mae Barry and Alice Saunders, accompanied by Mrs. H. C. Whitson, sang a duet. A quartet consisting of Ella Reinbold, Emil and Paul Wenzelberger sang, and Mrs. Mercedes H. Rugg led in the singing of America.

The saxophone band included Peter Calandra, Peter Jordana, Edo Pozzobon, Angelo Papagni, Minoru Saito, Fred Ruder, Ralph Fowler, Earl Meyers, John Dutes and Frances Condeita and was directed by F. C. Brohaska.

The class sponsors were Miss Rucy E. Brown and Miss Veda M. Jones.

Riverside Man's Skin Turns From White To Black

SANTA ANA, April 15.—(AP)—The Santa Ana Register said in a copyrighted story today that doctors are studying the case of William L. Morrison, 49, of Riverside, whose skin reportedly has turned from white to black since January.

The paper said that Morrison, an American, was taken ill after tending citrus orchard heaters in January. Two physicians in charge of the strange case, the Register said, discarded the theory that smudge smoke caused the ailment and diagnosed it as a rare form of melanosis, a disease which usually proves fatal.

The paper stated Morrison was under observation in St. Joseph's Hospital in Santa Ana for two days with about fifty physicians in attendance to study the case. The change in color was gradual, starting with his face and hands and finally turning his entire body black, it was reported.

After blood tests and careful analysis, the physician said that the color of came from a substance exuded from the liver into the blood stream. The change was painless, although Morrison dropped from his normal weight of 202 pounds to 160, and lost his appetite, the story said.

B Street Center Youth Aid Is Praised

The work of the B Street Community Center in providing stimulation for the underprivileged was praised last night by Mayor Blanton, a special service officer of the Fresno Police Department. Speaking at the second annual dinner of the organization in the center building at 1707 B Street, Blanton declared dozens more centers are needed to meet the requirements of Fresno's boys and girls.

"The police department is immensely behind this center," he noted. "The police never have called there, which is something cannot say of all the playgrounds and churches."

William E. Vickery, a member of the Fresno State College faculty, spoke on civil rights, discussing racial unity, safety, political freedom and freedom of expression for all classes of people.

Mrs. Roger Edwards, Miss Dorothy Sumner, Dr. Earl R. Meyers and Ernest Beal were elected as new members of the center's board of directors. The holdover board members are Chester H. Cary, Ishawan, Mrs. George W. H. Pope and Miss Josephine Seraho.

Winton added the hearings will be continued the following week if necessary.

Wants Statements

Winton also urged civic organizations to submit statements to the board on the type of government which Fresno should have.

Meanwhile, a three man publicity committee composed of Richard S. Baird, Dr. Earl R. Meyers and Claude J. Lisle was appointed to map special efforts for getting the public out for the sessions.

In other actions at the regular meeting late yesterday afternoon in the Fresno City Hall the board decided to request the League of California Cities to furnish the names of attorneys in the state, qualified in municipal law, from which the board can select a legal adviser who ultimately will draft the new charter.

Initiative Foes Plan Office In West Fresno

Californians Against Proposition 14 will open a West Fresno office at 452 Fresno Street.

Edward Lester chairman of the committee, said automobile stickers, literature and information against the proposition will be available in the new office and in the main office, 285 North Van Ness Avenue, beginning Monday.

Proposition 14 is a ballot initiative which would, if approved by a majority of the voters in November, nullify the Rumford Fair Housing Act, and nullify other laws prohibiting racial discrimination in the buying and selling of property.

The local committee against the initiative plans a voter registration drive to blanket West Fresno, where it estimated that only one out of four persons is registered to vote.

Persons interested in becoming deputy registrars are asked to attend a meeting in the office at 452 Fresno Street Tuesday at 7:30 PM. Dr. Hubert Phillips has charge of voter registration for the group.

Curry General Hospital

Dear Randy,

On April 22, 1986 will make the 9th month our Clinic has been in operation. We started with 4 patients and we are now solidly seeing between 20-25 patients daily. Thanks to Reg Williams and Ted Taylor who gave up their practice here and encouraged their patients here to come to me.

Our staff has worked miracles by making our patients feel they are the most important thing. This has been on a one-on-one contact basis. Patricia, my most capable assistant, and Betsy, our Lab and Xray Tech, make every emergency after office hour calls with me on each patient. Not one time have they given me an excuse as to why they were not available. This the community is aware of. The people know that if they need us we are available at our Clinic at any hour of the day or night.

It is this one main thing which I believe has made this Clinic a growing success: availability at the patients' convenience. My staff stops a patient in their tracks if they try to apologize for the inconvenience of bothering us. Both Patricia, Betsy and I tell them right off they have nothing to apologize for. It is our job to be here when they feel they need us. This attitude has gotten around to the whole town and outlying community about our dedication to our patients. We have the proof of this (Patients) appreciation when they come back asking us to take them on as patients.

We have attempted to make getting a consultation easier. 1. We have Elmer Specht, M.D. once a month on Orthopedics. 2. Ron Thompson has seen his Physio Therapy Clinic grow from twice a week to 3 times weekly and his schedule is always full. 3. We have a well attended Diabetic Clinic and we hope to make it into a Chapter of the American Diabetic Association. 4. Jammers Atherton of C.G.H. heads a breathing Clinic (PACE) which completely filled up and we have 2 more for a future Clinic. 5. Dr. Bolin has a full Internal Medical Clinic and he is here twice monthly. 6. Dr. Bill Kelso has a very well attended Trauma Clinic each week.

7. We also have Mr. Bruce Lundgren who has a Hearing Aid Clinic. All of these Clinics are well attended by the patients who welcome not having to go to Coos Bay or Gold Beach on consult.

We are trying to establish these Clinic in the future.

1. I'm in contact with a Podiatrist who is interested in establishing a practice once or twice weekly.
2. I'm in contact with a dietician who is interested in establishing a Diet and Nutrition Clinic once a week here.
3. I'm in contact with a Dentist who wants to locate in Port Orford and wants to affiliate with Westworld.

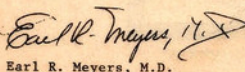

I am sure that the above Clinics can be established before the end of this year. I'm very elated about the Dental and Podiatry Clinics as I feel they can and will be very successful in every respect.

I would also like to thank Glenda and Randy for being supportive of us and providing us with the help we have received.

All in all, the Port Orford Clinic is very viable, alive and growing.

On the 22nd of July will mark our first anniversary at our Clinic. I feel that we should have an open house and some type of entertainment for our patients. I would suggest having an open house in the morning and afternoon with punch and hors'd'oeuvres. In the afternoon and evening we could rent the movie house for a show and have live entertainment on stage, serving the usual hot dogs, cold drinks, popcorn, etc.

Please comment.

Fresno's 'father of black medicine' dies at 95

By Eryn Baldrica-Guy
The Fresno Bee

Dr. Earl Randolph Meyers was a physician and surgeon who practiced medicine until the age of 85 and was known among his colleagues as "the father of black medicine in Fresno."

Dr. Meyers, who died Oct. 1 at age 95, opened his first medical clinic in 1947 on F Street in downtown Fresno. After 10 years as the only black physician in the Fresno area, Dr. Meyers began to encourage other black doctors to bring their services to Fresno. He built the Fresno-Klette Medical Arts Center, the first medical facility owned by local blacks, in west Fresno in 1957.

From early childhood, Dr. Meyers was inspired by Dr. Henry C. Wallace, who was then the only practicing black physician in Fresno. The young Dr. Meyers was impressed by Dr. Wallace's ability to relieve his mother of pain.

"Dr. Wallace inspired him. ... He was Earl's mother's doctor and he healed her," Mattie Meyers, Dr. Meyers' former wife, said. "At that time, there weren't any black doctors here. Dr. Wallace was Earl's mentor."

Dr. Meyers graduated from Fresno High School in 1937 and entered medical school in 1942. He received his M.D. degree from Tennessee's Meharry Medical College in 1945 and completed his internship and residency at Lincoln Hospital in Durham, N.C.

When Dr. Wallace left Fresno around the late 1940s, many black residents wrote to Dr. Meyers, describing the difficulty they had in getting medical care from white doctors and asking him to return to his hometown.

Because many of Dr. Meyers' first patients were unable to afford their medications, he opened a dispensary at his F Street office and made prescriptions available at wholesale cost. He often chose not to charge impoverished patients for his services.

The Fresno-Klette Medical Arts Center, established by Dr. Meyers on Fresno Street in 1957, made health care more readily available to west Frenshans. The facility was run by Dr. Meyers and other black physicians and included an X-ray department, a clinical laboratory and a pharmacy.

From Alexandria to Fresno
According to my father, Dr. Earl R. Meyers, M.D., His father (my grand father), Louis Meyers, moved his family from Alexandria, Louisiana (Grant Parish) to Fresno, California, when my father was just three months old.

—Eric Meyers, Sr.—

The hustle and bustle of downtown Fresno is recorded in this view looking north from the corner of Van Ness and K (Tulare) streets. Cars were well on the way to outnumbering horses, and parking was already a problem.

Louis Meyers is pictured in front of one of his most successful business adventures, the scrap metal business, where he did business, and was well known, up and down the West Coast of California, for his scrap metal business. Louis Meyers continued in this business for years, then, passed the business on to his three sons in his later years.

Junk Yard Fortune Seeker

Louis Meyers was well known for his prowess in dismantling large steam train locomotives and salvaging their boilers and reselling them for $5,000 each, during the 1929 depression...then turning the remains into scrap metal. —Dr. Earl R. Meyers, M.D. —
