Klay Thompson makes court return

Jeff Zillgitt

USA TODAY

Klay Thompson is back.

And it didn't take long for Thompson to prove he should be back to his NBA All-Star self in no time.

The Golden State guard made his season debut Sunday in the Warriors' 96-82 victory against the Cavaliers. It was Thompson's first game since Game 6 of the 2019 NBA Finals – a span covering 941 days following a torn ACL and Achilles tendon.

"Very special moment," Thompson said. "I'll never forget this night. I'll never forget the reception Warriors fans gave us, especially myself. Gosh, it was fun. It was worth every single day of being away. All the conditioning days, it was worth every single moment. I'm so grateful to just compete again. It's been a long time. I'm also proud of myself for just persevering. I'm not going to say it was equivalent to winning a championship, but man, it was pretty freaking close."

Thompson, who was in the starting lineup alongside longtime teammates Steph Curry and Draymond Green, had 17 points, including seven quick points at the start of the third quarter, on 7-for-18 shooting and 3-for-8 on 3-pointers in 20 minutes.

"Wasn't shy was he? Not that we would ever expect Klay to be shy," Warriors coach Steve Kerr said. "I was amazed at his poise out there and his confidence after being out for so long. ... A beautiful night."

Of the 18 shots in 20 minutes, Curry said, "That is so Klay Thompson."

Thompson dropped in a runner in the paint with 11:20 left in the first quarter on the Warriors' first possession, but Kerr said he didn't call the play for Thompson, who missed his first three 3-point attempts and checked out with 7:37 remaining in the first quarter.

But Thompson started to find his game in his second stint. He drove to the rim for a one-handed dunk with 2:56 remaining in the second quarter. "It felt so good to throw that down. I did not expect that," he said.

Then he made his first 3-pointer with 1:18 left in the half. He had explosiveness and his shot.

It might just take a few games – or more – before Thompson is back to All-Star Klay Thompson. But it's clear Thompson is ready to play and it shouldn't take long before he is back in game form.

"He got a lot of shots that I think he'll make consistently that he didn't make," Kerr said, "but he also made a bunch that were tough shots and some big ones, too. ... The adrenaline and high from tonight will come down eventually, and he's going to have to work his way through that over the next few games and continue to build up his endurance. The rhythm and timing will come but it's not going to be smooth sailing. He understands that."

While it was an important game for Thompson, the Warriors have larger long-term goals that include competing for a championship. How Thompson plays now is important, but not as important as how he is playing in April, May and perhaps June.

The Warriors are one of the best teams in the league at 30-9 – tied with Phoenix for first place in the Western Conference going into Monday. With a healthy Thompson on a deep roster, the Warriors are capable of returning to the Finals for the first time since 2019.

Thompson, 32, tore the ACL in his left knee in Game 6 of the 2019 Finals and missed the 2019-20 season. Just before the start of the 2020-21 season, he tore his right Achilles tendon, missing all of that season, too.

"Tonight is all about showing our appreciation for what he's had to go through individually and expressing our affection for him, and I know our fans are going to be going crazy," Kerr said before the game. "It's going to be emotional. In a lot of ways, it'll be a very difficult game just trying to lock in and focus while something much bigger than the outcome is actually happening, and that's the challenge for the group is to try to focus amidst all this emotion."

Warriors players wore Thompson's No. 11 jersey into San Francisco's Chase Center, and Thompson also received a standing ovation from Warriors fans when he was introduced as a starter. The Warriors also played a welcome back tribute video on the scoreboard.

There was much speculation about Thompson's return date. Just before Christmas? On Christmas? Jan. 2?

The seven-time All-Star started dropping hints six days ago, and on Saturday, Kerr told reporters it wasn't his news reveal and instructed them to watch their phones for a social media post.

"I'M SO EXCITED TO SEE YALL DUB-NATION ! LETS GET IT," Thompson posted Saturday on Instagram.

In a video shortly after posted on the Warriors' Twitter feed, Thompson said, "I hate to use the phrase 'can't wait' because I love to be present in my life. But I cannot wait to play in front of our fans again. I really, really enjoy being a Warrior."

Thompson wasn't the only one looking forward to his much-awaited return.

"I have no doubt when Klay walks on to the floor for the first time, I will never forget that game," Kerr told reporters Saturday. "It will stand out as one of the highlights of my entire basketball existence just because of who Klay is and how much he has meant to our franchise and to the Bay area and to me personally and to his teammates."

Returning from an Achilles injury isn't easy and couple that with an ACL injury, Thompson went through grueling rehabilitation to put himself in this position. Kobe Bryant struggled to return from his Achilles injury, but that was later in his career. Kevin Durant, Thompson's former teammate in Golden State, came back from an Achilles injury (sustained in the 2019 Finals) and re-established himself as one of the game's best players. Durant is an MVP candidate this season.

"We're going to ease him into his role," Kerr said.

Smith sets PGA Tour scoring record in win

Adam Schupak

Golfweek | USA TODAY Network

Cameron Smith and Jon Rahm put on the type of birdie barrage at the Sentry Tournament of Champions where it didn't seem fair that one of them had to lose.

In the end, the 28-year-old Aussie answered every birdie by the World No. 1 with one of his own, shooting 8-under-par 65 in the final round for a one-stroke victory in Hawaii.

"Mate, it was intense," Smith said. "Unreal round, something I'll never forget for sure."

It was a record-shattering performance as a soft and defenseless Plantation Course at Kapalua took another beating to par. On another glorious windless day, Smith signed for a total of 34-under 258, the most under par in a 72-hole event since 1950. Smith, who won the Sony Open in Hawaii in 2020, also completed the Hawaii double, joining Jim Furyk, Ernie Els, Vijay Singh, Zach Johnson and Justin Thomas as players who have won both Tour stops in Hawaii.

"Hawaii reminds me so much of where I grew up, it's insane," he said. "The grass that we hit off, the greens being quite slow and grainy. Yeah, it's awesome; I love it here."

Smith proved once again that he's capable of being a big-game hunter and more than just a golfer with a mullet beloved on social media. He previously knocked off Thomas in singles at the 2019 Presidents Cup. This time, he dueling Rahm, the U.S. Open champion and World No. 1, head-to-head over the weekend. In the final round, Smith jumped in front with a birdie at the fourth hole, wedging to 5 feet and going out in 32 to lead by two.

"I think the biggest difference was those first six holes today should have been a little bit better," said Rahm, who managed one birdie during that stretch.

He cut the deficit to one with a birdie at 11, but Smith, who loves to fish nearly every day when he is at home in Florida, reeled in three birdies in a row starting at No. 13 to match Rahm birdie for birdie.

Rahm, who equaled the Tour record for birdies in a 72-hole event with 32, pushed Smith to the finish line, forcing him to make one more birdie from 3 feet, 6 inches at the last hole to clinch his fourth career PGA Tour title.

"There's many reasons why Jon Rahm's the best player in the world and I witnessed it over the weekend," Smith said. "But to be able to hold him off, yeah, it was quite satisfying, I guess."

Smith made only three bogeys during the tournament and none over the weekend 36 holes. He opened with 65 and followed with a pair of 64s but that was only good enough to share the 54-hole lead with Rahm, who established a tournament 18-hole scoring record on Saturday with a round of 61 (set earlier in the day by Thomas). The third-round scoring average (67.711) was the lowest in a single round since the event moved to The Plantation Course in 1999.

"Golf fans just need to understand what cause scores. I think everybody, they just see, 'Oh, they're hitting it so far now, that's why it's so low.' It's like no, it's so low because it's so soft and if you give us soft conditions, fairways this big, course this short, we're going to shoot nothing," said Thomas, who apparently considers 7,600-yard courses to be "short" these days. "Then if you give us not very much wind, we're going to shoot even lower."

Matt Jones, who shot 62-61 on the weekend, was the third player to set the course record and break Els' 31-under total record for 72-hole score in relation to par, which Els set at this tournament in 2003. Jones finished alone in third. It wasn't lost on Rahm how ridiculously well both he and Jones played and neither went home with a trophy.

"It's kind of weird when you look forward in the records that there's two of us that beat (the lowest 72-hole) score and lost by one and two," he said.

Reigning FedExCup champion Patrick Cantlay (67) was alone in fourth, a distant eight strokes behind Smith. Collin Morikawa, the World No. 2, fired a 62 on Sunday to finish in a tie for fifth with Thomas and Daniel Berger.

Smith's victory continues an interesting trend of alternating victories between New Orleans and Hawaii. His first win was the Zurich Classic of New Orleans in 2017 with Jonas Blixt. His second came at the 2020 Sony Open in Hawaii. He then again won the Zurich last year with fellow Aussie Marc Leishman before his win this weekend at Kapalua.

Smith didn't waste any time achieving one of his goals for the new year – he climbed into the top 10 in the world for the first time in his career.

"That's really cool," Smith said. "It's nice that that's done and dusted. Hopefully I can keep cruising up those world rankings."
