Dear Mayor Brand and Fresno City Councilmembers:

We, the undersigned Fresno clergy and faith leaders, write with hope from the news that Mayor Brand intends to bring a routine housing inspection program proposal forward for your consideration on Thursday, February 2nd. As you know, this is long overdue and urgently needed not only by tenants living in substandard housing conditions but by our city as a whole. For your reference, we are sending again the letter that many of us wrote to you and then-Mayor Swearingin last December. While we were disappointed in your decision then to delay consideration of a routine inspection program, our sentiments – and the conditions on the ground – remain just as true going into Thursday's vote. We urge you to consider, adopt and urgently implement as strong a routine inspection program as possible. Our communities and your most vulnerable constituents are counting on it.

In Community,

Most Reverend Armando X. Ochoa, D.D., Bishop, Diocese of Fresno
Rt. Rev. David Rice, Bishop, Episcopal Diocese of San Joaquin

Dear Mayor Swarengin and Fresno City Councilmembers:

As clergy and faith leaders representing congregations and communities across various faiths, backgrounds and corners of our city, we write to you today to urge you to bring forward, pass and begin implementing a housing inspection program proposal before the end of December. For years, you and we have known that we have faced a true crisis of substandard rental housing in Fresno, where far too many families – including many of those we serve and love – are trapped in rental housing conditions that are unsafe, unhealthy, unethical and against the law. While there are many reasons and factors for this, one is that we have left the City of Fresno off the hook from its responsibility to enforce state habitability standards. Sadly, it took the crisis at Summerset last winter to reveal just how real, serious and threatening substandard housing could be.

Much has already been made of the economic costs – to the City, taxpayers, landlords who are doing right by their tenants – and health costs – to tenants and indirectly to all of us – of substandard housing. But, as faith leaders representing a range of traditions and teachings, we are particularly pained by the moral costs of this crisis. We believe and know that every individual in our city deserves the right to human dignity, a safe and warm roof over their head, and elected representatives who will stand up on their behalf.

While we are thankful for the Mayor's Code Enforcement Task Force - including the research and best practice models from countless other cities across the country that have been discussed for the past year – the time is now for comprehensive, proactive action. Frankly, it is long overdue. We are encouraged to hear Mayor Swarengin's intention to bring forward a proposal before the end of the year. We hope that it includes a baseline inspection of all rental housing properties, followed by a routine, but fair and strategic schedule for subsequent oversight of properties that allows for follow-up of properties and owners found to have violations, as well as incentives and rewards for the many properties and owners who are clearly playing by the rules. Until then, we have no way of knowing how many other Summersets are out there today, waiting to be the next crisis.

We pray that all seven Councilmembers will follow the clear research and listen to the cries of our most vulnerable residents and support the strongest possible baseline inspection program this year.
